DISTRICT OF NEVADA

JONATHAN COHAN,

Plaintiff,

vs.

PROVIDENT LIFE AND ACCIDENT
INSURANCE COMPANY, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 2:13-cv-00975-LDG-CWH

ORDER

This matter is before the Court on Defendants' Emergency Motion for Enlargement of Time (#111), filed August 13, 2014. Upon filing, the Court granted the request that the motion be considered on an emergency basis and shortened the time for briefing. Plaintiff filed his response (#113) on August 20, 2014. Defendants' reply (#115) was filed on August 25, 2014.

BACKGROUND

The motion is straightforward. Defendants seek an additional three hours to depose Plaintiff under Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d). It is uncontested that the parties agreed to take Plaintiff's deposition in multiple sessions. The first session went forward on or about November 20, 2013, and lasted for approximately five hours and 48 minutes. At the conclusion of the first session, the parties agreed that the remainder of the deposition would take place on another date. After the first session, Plaintiff's counsel informed Defendants' counsel that review of Plaintiff's email account disclosed approximately 100,000 emails, which comprised approximately 27 GB of data. Defendants indicate in their motion that "Plaintiff never mentioned the existence of these e-mails at any time prior to, or during, his deposition." See Defs' Mot. (#111) at 4:8-9. Ultimately, Defendants agreed to pay for a third-party vendor to review the emails for responsiveness and

1 privilege subject to protocol agreed upon by the parties. At a cost of over $83,000, the review of 2 the disclosed emails yielded approximately 19,000 responsive emails comprising 57,177 pages.
3 The documents were initially provided by the third-party vendor to Plaintiff's counsel for review.
4 In July 2014, Plaintiff elected to produce the entirety of the emails to Defendants subject to agreed 5 upon conditions. Review of the emails was completed on July 27, 2014, and, according to 6 Defendants, a "host of new questions concerning Plaintiff's claims" arise as a result of the 7 disclosure. Consequently, they request an additional three hours on top of the remaining one hour
8 and 12 minutes to conduct the second session of Plaintiff's deposition.

9 Characterizing the motion as an attempt to "manipulate the discovery rules to circumvent 10 the presumptive seven-hour deposition limit[.]" Plaintiff asks that the second session of the 11 deposition be limited to the one and 12 minutes that remain. Plaintiff does not dispute that the 12 parties agreed to conduct the deposition over multiple session on multiple dates, but argues that the 13 requested extension should be denied because it is not justified under Rule 26(b)(2). Specifically, 14 Plaintiff's counsel points to an email communication to Defendants' counsel before the first 15 session of the deposition indicating that there were likely additional emails that may be relevant in 16 Plaintiff's deposition (see Pl's Resp. (#113) 3:7-20; Exhibit 1) demonstrating that Plaintiff did
17 know about the existence of emails prior to the first session of the deposition. Thus, Plaintiff
18 argues, the decision to go forward without the undisclosed emails was made by Defendant with full 19 knowledge that there may be additional material that may be relevant to the deposition. Plaintiff 20 further argues that the additional emails did not reveal any new information that would justify the 21 additional time. To the extent the motion is not denied, Plaintiff requests that Defendant be 22 ordered not to duplicate the same material or questions that were subjects during the first 23 deposition session and that any time beyond seven hours be counted against the 10 deposition limit
24 set forth in Rule 30.

25 DISCUSSION

26 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 30(d)(1) provides that "[u]nless otherwise stipulated or 27 ordered by the court, a deposition is limited to 1 day of 7 hours." Analysis begins with the 28 presumption that extensions to the seven-hour limit are the exception, not the rule. Mendez v. R+L

1 Carriers, Inc., 2012 WL 1535756 (N.D. Cal.) (citation omitted). “The party seeking a court order 2 to extend the examination, or otherwise alter the limitations, is expected to show good cause to 3 justify such an order.” See Adv. Comm. Notes to 2000 Amendments; see also Withers v.
4 eHarmony, Inc., 267 F.R.D. 316, 321 (C.D. Cal. 2010). Upon a showing of good cause, “[t]he 5 court must allow additional time consistent with Rule 26(b)(2) if needed to fairly examine the 6 deponent[.]” Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(d)(1) (emphasis added). The court must “guard against redundant
7 or disproportionate discovery.” U-Haul Co. of Nevada, Inc. v. Gregory J. Kamer, Ltd., 2013 WL
8 5278523 (D. Nev.).

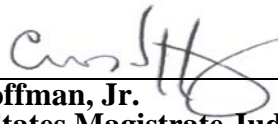

9       After review, the Court concludes that an additional three hours for Plaintiff’s deposition is 10 appropriate. The parties have agreed that this is not a second deposition, but a continuation of the 11 first deposition. Though it is true that Defendants were informed there would “likely be additional 12 emails” that may be relevant prior to the first session of the deposition, there does not appear to 13 have been any indication of the volume of that potential production. Immediately after the first 14 session, and at great cost, approximately 19,000 emails have been disclosed. It is neither 15 unreasonable nor cumulative to permit additional time for questioning in the deposition based on 16 the sheer volume of the production. Moreover, the burden or expense of the discovery is minimal, 17 as Plaintiff and his counsel previously agreed to the second session of the deposition. Lastly, the 18 Court disagrees that Defendants have had “ample opportunity to” obtain the information they seek.
19 While it may be true that some of the 19,000 emails cover information already addressed in the 20 deposition, undoubtedly some of it does not. Thus, having agreed that this is a continuation of the 21 first deposition, the Court declines Plaintiff’s invitation to treat it as a second or additional 22 deposition. The Court also declines to place arbitrary limits on the subject matter or scope of 23 questions that may be asked during the deposition. The agreed upon second session of the original
24 deposition shall proceed and Defendants shall be afforded an additional three hours to conduct 25 Plaintiff’s deposition.

26       Based on the foregoing and good cause appearing,

27       IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Defendants’ Emergency Motion for Enlargement of 28 Time (#111) is granted.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendants' Motion to Seal (#117) is granted.

DATED: August 26, 2014.
